were represented to-day in the City Hall when Mayor Mitchel gave a hearing on two bills in which the teachers of New York are interested. Up in the centre of the crescent shaped table sat the Mayor. On the right, huddled in a corner, pale but determined, were a number of taxpayers representing various associations which opposed the bills. The taxpayers said it would cost many millions to put through the provisions of the measures. And they spoke in fear and trembling, did those earnest men. For half a thousand teachers glared as they spoke, and if sarcasm wreathed in smiles could crush the taxpayers would have turned into powder and wafted away.

The teachers had their line-up admirably planned. In the front row were the girls just out of normal school, bright eyed and attractive. Not a gray hair was there. Farther back in the lines the silver threads began to show. In the last row stood the grim and unsmiling matrons of many winters.

One of the measures the teachers want the Mayor to sign is known as the Boylan-Kerrigan bill, which provides among other things that $300 shall be the minimum salary and that equal pay shall be given all teachers in the elementary schools. About 15,000 teachers are said to be affected by the bill. The other measure—the Foley bill—aims to equalize salaries in the seventh and eighth grades.

Miss Grace Strachan, speaking for the Interborough Teachers' Association, was the central figure at the hearing. She wore a black muslin hat and a coat and skirt to match. Miss Strachan spoke for the Boylan-Kerrigan bill, but didn't look with much favor upon the Foley measure because she didn't regard its provisions sweeping enough to suit the teachers. Miss Strachan spoke against the discrimination against women teachers in the matter of pay just because they were women.

"Mayor Mitchel didn't reduce the salary of Commissioner of Correction when he appointed Katharine B. Davis, a woman, to the job," argued Miss Strachan.

The poor taxpayers seemed to be looking for a convenient fire escape. But there are none in the City Hall, so they had to stay.

But the opposition had some innuendoes too. Henry R. M. Cook, a little man with a cold calculating eye, said he was auditor of the Board of Education and then began to give some figures as to what the two bills would mean.

"Making a strained guess," said the auditor, "the Boylan bill might cost more than $5,000,000 to the taxpayers. The Foley bill, I should say, would cost on a maximum of $1,800,000 and on a minimum of $1,100,000."

This means that the two bills, if passed, would cost the city not less than $5,000,000 or $4,000,000. The Mayor announced that he would not stand for such an increase. Assemblyman John Kerrigan told why he favored the bill and a proud father was he.

"No one knows better than John Kerrigan why the teachers should get more pay," said the Assemblyman, "and if you sign this bill, when you're old the teachers will point to you and say, 'There's old man Mitchel, a grand old man, for he gave the teachers a square deal.' What's a few million when it's spent on the ladies that's educating the Mayors and the Senators and Assemblymen like myself? Mr. Mayor, if you want to be a grand old man, sign that bill."

NEW TUBERCULOSIS CURE.

Sulphuric Acid Fumes Declared Effective in Incipient Cases.

CINCINNATI, April 9.—By breathing sulphuric acid fumes incipient cases of tuberculosis can be frequently cured, according to a public announcement made to-day in the convention of the American Chemical Society meeting by Dr. Edward Gudeman of Ohio. Dr. Gudeman stated that, while this fact had been known for some time among certain physicians and chemists, yet the demonstration along this line had not progressed far enough to make the announcement public until to-day.
